

THE C.H.A.D

Welcome

Volume 1, Issue 4, 02/06/17

It is February and that means that it is the month of LOVE! So it is perfect that I get to send out a newsletter about something I love, Education Technology. I hope you enjoy this newsletter as much as I do.

Microsoft Office

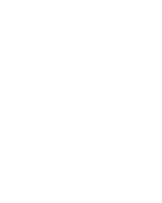

Did you know that because our school is so awesome we get a discount on Microsoft Office software? You pay just $9.99 instead of paying $299.99 for all of your favorite applications like word, outlook, excel, and powerpoint. You used to only be allowed a copy of either Mac or PC. This year they are allowing you to purchase both at $9.99 incase you have both a Mac and a PC in the home. Here is the link to get all the information. When you type in your email, make sure to use srvusd.net and not the old srvhs.org email address.

Technology Quote of the week

"Any sufficiently advanced technology is indistinguishable from magic."

-Arthur C. Clarke

Displaying on your Projector

We in the technology department get asked from time to time... "What is the fancy keyboard shortcut to make my projector show what is on my computer?" Our answer is always the same. Press the Windows (the 4 squares on a button between Ctrl and Alt) and the letter P at the same time. Then select "duplicate" to show the same thing on your screen to the projector. ADVANCED HINT: use the "extend" option to use the projector like a 2nd monitor. That way you can use your monitor and work while you show a film or presentation on the projector.

Great Book

If you want to read an awesome book on the secret world of technology, look no further than Future Crimes by Marc Goodman. The book looks at the dangers of our world being connected all of the time and will leave you with a new outlook on our current internet based society. Future Crimes covers many current issues like; cyber crime, the dark web, bitcoin, the internet of things, and governmental cyber attacks on other countries.
